SHAKESPEARE'S LEGAL ACQUAINTANCE, CONSIDERED.

John, Lord Campbell, Esq. L. D. F. R. S. E.

In a Letter to J. Payne Collier, esq., F. S. A.

vol. 12mo. Close, 75 cents.

Whether Shakespeare was ever in an attorney's office at Stratford-upon-Avon, or not, is a question, in other words, was the author of Macbeth and Hamlet, and King Lear, was employed some years in engraving deeds, writing wills, and making out bills of costs—such a question, which has been keenly agitated late years, is not easily answered, nor is there any general agreement of the most indifferent of whom. Mr. Payne Collier, knowing Lord Campbell to be an enthusiastic admirer of the Master Dramatist, as well as one of the most eminent of living Jurists, peculiarly demanded his opinion on this point. Mr. Collier has here given him an agreeable literary diversion, with which the author of the "Lives of the Chancellors" and the "Lives of the Chief-Judges" has rested him. It forms a tour de force, and drives from his repose, like a bolt from the blue. The author of Shakspeare's Writings in Hall. And, as might be supposed, the volume is as pleasant as the process by which it was made—like that, also, frequently as anything as it is itself true.

Lord Campbell, for all that, may think it right to adduce a few quotations showing a notion of "Law and Justice," which, like "Law and Equity," have too long been kept apart.

Students of Shakespeare and students of the Law will generally join interests over this book.
